

Electronic Payment Methods and its importance in the settlement of payments between the mutual parties

Prepared by
Ghassan Ghandour

Supervised by & Co-Supervised by Dr. Ali Kanan Dr. Ammar Naser Agha

Department of Economy
College of Economics
Damascus University

Abstract

Most of the electronic money that has been developed so far to meet certain functions and say that they replaced the money traditional is wrong despite huge advances in the forms of electronic payment but the money still have traditional keep its place special handling, especially in large deals that need to be degree significant protection.

Therefore we can say that there is a significant shift in the monetary sphere is happening today in the world, despite the recent this transformation but it could be argued that the accelerations shall that have occurred in the area of the digital revolution has opened the way for radical shift in the pattern of trade and international exchange in line with globalization, which is dominated on all branches of activities, especially in areas relating to how the exchange of goods and settlement of obligations

For the Paper in Arabic Language See the Pages (571-590)